ATTENTION PARENTS!

Does your preschool age child*:

- Have a huge vocabulary but have trouble rhyming words?
- Have difficulty learning to tie his/her shoes?
- Struggle to learn the alphabet?

Does your elementary age child*:

- Still has difficulty with directionality (which way the b and d, u and n, p and q go) past the 1st grade?
- Struggle to keep up with peers even though he/she is a bright/smart child?
- Labeled as "lazy" or "he/she will mature" by teachers?
- Have a hard time memorizing sight words and/or multiplication tables?
- When speaking, have difficulty finding the correct word with many "whatyamacallits" and "thingies" and say common sayings that come out slightly twisted?
- Have a diagnosis of a processing disorder?

Does your high school age child have any of the above, plus*:

- Poor written expression?
- Inability to master a foreign language?
- Limited vocabulary?
- High comprehension, low reading level?

Are you an ADULT with an educational history similar to above, plus*:

- Reads slowly/reads a page 2 to 3 times to understand it?
- Has persistent spelling difficulties/dreads writing memos or letters?
